

Classic Style Seeds

A short quotation treasury for 11+ creative writing

How to use this book: learn the seed, notice the technique, then write your own version. Do not copy the original line into school writing. Copy the craft, not the sentence.

The quotations are deliberately short. They are there to train memory, rhythm and technique.

Character

1. Character - sharp portraits

"a squeezing, wrenching, grasping, scraping, clutching, covetous old sinner"

Charles Dickens, A Christmas Carol (1843), Stave I

Device: Alliteration and piling verbs

Why it works: The repeated hard sounds make Scrooge feel mean before the reader is told he is mean.

Portable move: Stack five related actions before the noun.

Reusable frame: a [verb-ing], [verb-ing], [verb-ing] sort of [person]

6. Character - compressed summary

"handsome, clever, and rich"

Jane Austen, Emma (1815), Chapter 1

Device: Triple adjective portrait

Why it works: Three quick adjectives establish a whole social position.

Portable move: Choose three precise adjectives that do real work.

Reusable frame: [adjective], [adjective], and [adjective]

7. Character - moral diagnosis

"vanity was the beginning and the end"

Jane Austen, Persuasion (1817), Chapter 1

Device: Abstract judgement

Why it works: The phrase turns a flaw into a whole life story.

Portable move: Make one trait dominate a character's world.

Reusable frame: [trait] was the beginning and the end

10. Character - comic judgement

"a perfect misanthropist's heaven"

Emily Bronte, Wuthering Heights (1847), Chapter 1

Device: Paradox

Why it works: A miserable place becomes heaven for the sort of person who dislikes people.

Portable move: Define a place by the person who would enjoy it.

Reusable frame: a perfect [type of person]'s heaven

17. Character - visual shorthand

"the brown old seaman"

Robert Louis Stevenson, Treasure Island (1883), Chapter 1

Device: Compact noun phrase

Why it works: Three plain words give age, colour and occupation.

Portable move: Use colour, age and role in one phrase.

Reusable frame: the [colour] old [role]

22. Character - eyes

"his eyes were sharp and piercing"

Arthur Conan Doyle, A Study in Scarlet (1887), Chapter 2

Device: Eye description

Why it works: The eyes suggest intelligence and danger.

Portable move: Use two adjectives that point to mental qualities.

Reusable frame: his/her eyes were [adjective] and [adjective]

23. Character - inner label

"his whole Bohemian soul"

Arthur Conan Doyle, The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes (1892), A Scandal in Bohemia

Device: Compressed identity

Why it works: The phrase makes a whole temperament feel portable.

Portable move: Give a character a noun for the soul.

Reusable frame: his/her whole [quality/group] soul

33. Character - buried instinct

"the dominant primordial beast was strong in Buck"

Jack London, The Call of the Wild (1903), Chapter 2

Device: Latinate force

Why it works: The phrase makes instinct sound ancient and powerful.

Portable move: Use an ancient-sounding adjective for an instinct.

Reusable frame: the [ancient adjective] [instinct/feeling] was strong in [name]

37. Character - animal comparison

"a cygnet is reared uneasily among the ducklings"

George Eliot, Middlemarch (1871), Prelude

Device: Classical comparison

Why it works: The comparison suggests awkward beauty not yet understood.

Portable move: Use a young animal among plainer animals.

Reusable frame: a [young graceful animal] among [ordinary animals]

39. Character - time on a face

"A Face on Which Time Makes but Little Impression"

Thomas Hardy, The Return of the Native (1878), Book First, Chapter I

Device: Time personified

Why it works: Time becomes a force that presses or fails to press on a face.

Portable move: Let time act on a person physically.

Reusable frame: a face on which time had [verb] [effect]

44. Character - frank judgement

"the most disagreeable-looking child ever seen"

Frances Hodgson Burnett, The Secret Garden (1911), Chapter 1

Device: Exaggerated judgement

Why it works: The narrator dares to be blunt, which makes the portrait memorable.

Portable move: Use a bold judgement, then prove it with detail.

Reusable frame: the most [adjective]-looking [person] ever seen

50. Character - shy radiance

"She was a Phantom of delight"

William Wordsworth, Poems (1807), She was a Phantom of Delight

Device: Metaphor

Why it works: A person is introduced as something almost supernatural.

Portable move: Turn a person into a striking abstract image.

Reusable frame: She/He was a [image] of [emotion]

58. Character - radiant comparison

"Juliet is the sun"

William Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet (1597), Act II, Scene II

Device: Metaphor

Why it works: A person becomes the source of light for the whole scene.

Portable move: Make one person change the lighting of a place.

Reusable frame: [Name] is the [source of light].

Landscape

3. Landscape - line and distance

"a long black horizontal line"

Charles Dickens, Great Expectations (1861), Chapter 1

Device: Shape and colour

Why it works: A plain landscape becomes memorable because the eye sees a simple line.

Portable move: Reduce a place to shape plus colour.

Reusable frame: a [length] [colour] [shape] of [place]

9. Landscape - pale weather

"a pale blank of mist and cloud"

Charlotte Bronte, Jane Eyre (1847), Chapter 1

Device: Visual metaphor

Why it works: The weather becomes a blank page, empty and cold.

Portable move: Use one colour and one abstract noun for the sky.

Reusable frame: a [colour] blank of [weather]

21. Landscape - sea metaphor

"a sea of green tree tops"

Bram Stoker, Dracula (1897), Chapter 1

Device: Metaphor and colour

Why it works: Trees become water, making the landscape feel vast.

Portable move: Turn a mass of objects into a sea.

Reusable frame: a sea of [colour] [things]

34. Landscape - wide opening

"The sea-reach of the Thames stretched before us"

Joseph Conrad, Heart of Darkness (1899), Part I

Device: Expansive verb

Why it works: The verb stretched makes the river open outward.

Portable move: Choose a verb that makes the view expand.

Reusable frame: The [place] stretched before us.

40. Landscape - absence

"the forests have departed"

Thomas Hardy, Tess of the d'Urbervilles (1891), Phase the First

Device: Personification of loss

Why it works: The woods are treated as if they have walked away.

Portable move: Make a missing part of the landscape actively depart.

Reusable frame: the [natural thing] had departed

45. Landscape - childlike naming

"the White Way of Delight"

L. M. Montgomery, Anne of Green Gables (1908), Chapter 2

Device: Invented place-name

Why it works: Anne turns a road into a feeling.

Portable move: Rename a place according to the emotion it gives.

Reusable frame: the [Colour] Way of [Emotion]

51. Landscape - simile

"I wandered lonely as a cloud"

William Wordsworth, Poems in Two Volumes (1807), I Wandered Lonely as a Cloud

Device: Simile

Why it works: Loneliness is made light and drifting, not just sad.

Portable move: Choose a natural object that moves like the feeling.

Reusable frame: I [verb] [emotion] as a [natural thing].

52. Landscape - seasonal abundance

"Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness"

John Keats, Poems Published in 1820 (1820), To Autumn

Device: Sound and richness

Why it works: Soft m sounds make the season feel full and ripe.

Portable move: Use sound to create softness or richness.

Reusable frame: Season of [weather] and [adjective noun]

55. Landscape - river opening

"On either side the river lie"

Alfred Tennyson, The Lady of Shalott (1832), Part I

Device: Inverted word order

Why it works: The old-fashioned order gives the line a storybook music.

Portable move: Move the verb to make a line sound formal or mythic.

Reusable frame: On either side the [place] [verb]

Atmosphere

2. Atmosphere - weather and mood

"Fog everywhere"

Charles Dickens, Bleak House (1853), Chapter 1

Device: Repetition and one-word atmosphere

Why it works: The tiny sentence lets the weather swallow the whole world.

Portable move: Name one dominant thing and make it feel everywhere.

Reusable frame: [Noun] everywhere.

16. Atmosphere - sinister buildings

"a certain sinister block of building"

Robert Louis Stevenson, Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde (1886), Story of the Door

Device: Loaded adjective

Why it works: One adjective changes bricks into threat.

Portable move: Place one charged adjective before an ordinary noun.

Reusable frame: a certain [threatening adjective] [ordinary object]

20. Atmosphere - confinement

"The castle is a veritable prison"

Bram Stoker, Dracula (1897), Chapter 2

Device: Metaphor of place

Why it works: The building becomes a trap in one sentence.

Portable move: Rename a place as what it feels like.

Reusable frame: The [place] is a veritable [trap/image].

26. Atmosphere - gothic weather

"a dull, dark, and soundless day"

Edgar Allan Poe, The Fall of the House of Usher (1839), Opening

Device: Alliteration and sensory absence

Why it works: The d sounds and silence create heaviness before anything happens.

Portable move: Choose three adjectives, with at least two sharing a sound.

Reusable frame: a [sound-linked], [sound-linked], and [silent] day

29. Atmosphere - sleepy sound

"a drowsy, dreamy influence"

Washington Irving, The Legend of Sleepy Hollow (1820), Opening

Device: Alliteration and mood

Why it works: The repeated d sound makes the place feel half asleep.

Portable move: Use sound to make atmosphere.

Reusable frame: a [sound-linked], [sound-linked] influence

Emotion

11. Emotion - fear arriving

"the intense horror of nightmare came over me"

Emily Bronte, Wuthering Heights (1847), Chapter 3

Device: Emotion as movement

Why it works: Fear is not named once and left still; it comes over the narrator.

Portable move: Make an emotion move towards or over a character.

Reusable frame: the [emotion] of [image] came over me

12. Emotion - shattered hope

"the beauty of the dream vanished"

Mary Shelley, Frankenstein (1818), Chapter 5

Device: Abstract contrast

Why it works: One beautiful abstract noun collapses into horror.

Portable move: Let a hopeful image disappear in one verb.

Reusable frame: the beauty of the [hope] vanished

13. Emotion - body and disgust

"breathless horror and disgust filled my heart"

Mary Shelley, Frankenstein (1818), Chapter 5

Device: Paired emotion

Why it works: Two emotions press into the body at once.

Portable move: Combine a physical state with a moral feeling.

Reusable frame: [physical feeling] [emotion] and [emotion] filled my [body part]

30. Emotion - weather inside

"a damp, drizzly November in my soul"

Herman Melville, Moby-Dick (1851), Chapter 1

Device: Weather metaphor

Why it works: Mood becomes a month and a climate.

Portable move: Put weather inside the person.

Reusable frame: a [weather] [month/season] in my soul

56. Emotion - poisoned mind

"full of scorpions is my mind"

William Shakespeare, Macbeth (1606), Act III, Scene II

Device: Metaphor and inversion

Why it works: The mind becomes a container of venomous creatures.

Portable move: Put a dangerous creature inside an abstract place.

Reusable frame: full of [creatures] is my [mind/heart]

Openings

4. Openings - contrast

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times"

Charles Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities (1859), Book I, Chapter 1

Device: Balanced contrast

Why it works: The sentence grips the reader by holding opposites in the same hand.

Portable move: Pair two opposites in the same structure.

Reusable frame: It was the [best] of [things], it was the [worst] of [things]

8. Openings - immediate obstacle

"There was no possibility of taking a walk that day"

Charlotte Bronte, Jane Eyre (1847), Chapter 1

Device: Negative opening

Why it works: The story begins by closing down freedom.

Portable move: Open with something impossible.

Reusable frame: There was no possibility of [ordinary action] that day.

24. Openings - dramatic denial

"No one would have believed"

H. G. Wells, The War of the Worlds (1898), Book I, Chapter 1

Device: Negative hook

Why it works: The opening tells the reader that ordinary certainty is about to fail.

Portable move: Begin by denying that anyone expected the event.

Reusable frame: No one would have believed [event].

27. Openings - rhythm

"Once upon a midnight dreary"

Edgar Allan Poe, The Raven (1845), Opening

Device: Rhythm and inverted adjective

Why it works: The word order makes the line sound old, musical and ominous.

Portable move: Move the adjective after the noun for an old-fashioned effect.

Reusable frame: Once upon a [time] [adjective]

31. Openings - direct address

"Call me Ishmael"

Herman Melville, Moby-Dick (1851), Chapter 1

Device: Blunt first-person hook

Why it works: Three words create a voice that feels close and mysterious.

Portable move: Start with a command that gives a name.

Reusable frame: Call me [name].

46. Openings - ordinary before magic

"The Mole had been working very hard all the morning"

Kenneth Grahame, The Wind in the Willows (1908), Chapter 1

Device: Ordinary action

Why it works: A magical-feeling story starts with an everyday task.

Portable move: Begin with work before wonder enters.

Reusable frame: The [character] had been [ordinary action] all the morning.

47. Openings - universal rule

"All children, except one, grow up"

J. M. Barrie, Peter Pan (1911), Chapter 1

Device: Rule with exception

Why it works: A huge rule is made magical by one exception.

Portable move: State a general rule, then break it.

Reusable frame: All [group], except one, [ordinary truth].

Setting

14. Setting - sensory detail

"the rich odour of roses"

Oscar Wilde, The Picture of Dorian Gray (1890), Chapter 1

Device: Scent imagery

Why it works: The room is introduced through smell, not sight.

Portable move: Start a scene with scent.

Reusable frame: the [texture] odour of [thing]

41. Setting - industrial compression

"this big smoky place"

Elizabeth Gaskell, North and South (1854), Chapter 7

Device: Plain loaded adjective

Why it works: The phrase is simple, but smoky tells us industry, dirt and mood.

Portable move: Use one physical adjective that carries social meaning.

Reusable frame: this big [physical adjective] place

Voice

5. Voice - irony

"a single man in possession of a good fortune"

Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice (1813), Chapter 1

Device: Social irony

Why it works: The formal wording sounds polite while quietly teasing society.

Portable move: Use serious phrasing for a slightly ridiculous idea.

Reusable frame: a [person] in possession of [object/status]

18. Voice - surprise

"curiouser and curiouser"

Lewis Carroll, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland (1865), Chapter 2

Device: Invented comparative

Why it works: The wrong grammar sounds exactly like a child's astonishment.

Portable move: Bend a word when ordinary grammar is too tidy.

Reusable frame: [adjective]-er and [adjective]-er

32. Voice - direct confidence

"You don't know about me"

Mark Twain, Adventures of Huckleberry Finn (1884), Chapter 1

Device: Conversational opening

Why it works: The narrator sounds as if he is already speaking to you.

Portable move: Begin by challenging the reader's knowledge.

Reusable frame: You don't know about [person/thing].

Image

19. Image - impossible detail

"a grin without a cat"

Lewis Carroll, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland (1865), Chapter 6

Device: Comic impossibility

Why it works: The image is memorable because it keeps the effect but removes the cause.

Portable move: Detach one feature from the thing it belongs to.

Reusable frame: a [feature] without a [owner]

54. Image - bright danger

"Tyger Tyger, burning bright"

William Blake, Songs of Experience (1794), The Tyger

Device: Repetition and fire image

Why it works: The repeated name and burning image make beauty feel dangerous.

Portable move: Repeat the subject, then give it a dangerous glow.

Reusable frame: [Thing] [thing], [burning/gleaming] [adjective]

Symbol

15. Symbol - colour thread

"scarlet threads of life"

Oscar Wilde, The Picture of Dorian Gray (1890), Chapter 14

Device: Colour metaphor

Why it works: Life becomes something coloured, woven and difficult to untangle.

Portable move: Turn an idea into a coloured thread, stain or mark.

Reusable frame: [colour] threads of [idea]

28. Symbol - beauty beside danger

"a wild rose-bush"

Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter (1850), Chapter 1

Device: Symbolic object

Why it works: A fragile natural object stands beside punishment and shame.

Portable move: Put a beautiful object beside a harsh place.

Reusable frame: a [beautiful wild thing] beside [harsh place]

Movement

25. Movement - light and dark

"The twinkling succession of darkness and light"

H. G. Wells, The Time Machine (1895), Chapter 4

Device: Alternating nouns

Why it works: The phrase makes speed visible through alternating contrasts.

Portable move: Use a succession of opposites.

Reusable frame: a [flickering/twinkling] succession of [opposite] and [opposite]

53. Movement - alliteration

"The fair breeze blew, the white foam flew"

Samuel Taylor Coleridge, The Rime of the Ancient Mariner (1798), Part II

Device: Parallel alliteration

Why it works: The matching structure gives the movement speed and music.

Portable move: Repeat grammar and sound across two clauses.

Reusable frame: The [adjective noun] [verb], the [adjective noun] [verb].

Mystery

42. Mystery - visual label

"the woman in white"

Wilkie Collins, The Woman in White (1860), Title and opening image

Device: Iconic visual tag

Why it works: A person becomes unforgettable through one colour.

Portable move: Name a character by a striking colour or object.

Reusable frame: the [person] in [colour/object]

43. Mystery - object focus

"the yellow Diamond"

Wilkie Collins, The Moonstone (1868), Prologue

Device: Capitalised object

Why it works: The object is made to feel important before we know why.

Portable move: Give an object colour and status.

Reusable frame: the [colour] [object]

Action

49. Action - animal strength

"Bagheera's eyes were as hard as jade stones"

Rudyard Kipling, The Jungle Book (1894), Kaa's Hunting

Device: Hard simile

Why it works: The eyes show anger through a cold, hard object.

Portable move: Show danger through a precise comparison.

Reusable frame: [character]'s eyes were as hard as [stone/object]

59. Action - unleashed violence

"let slip the dogs of war"

William Shakespeare, Julius Caesar (1599), Act III, Scene I

Device: Metaphor

Why it works: War becomes a pack of animals straining at a leash.

Portable move: Turn a conflict into something released.

Reusable frame: let slip the [creatures] of [conflict]

Sound

48. Sound - playful geography

"the great grey-green, greasy Limpopo River"

Rudyard Kipling, Just So Stories (1902), The Elephant's Child

Device: Alliteration

Why it works: The repeated gr sounds make the river comic and sticky.

Portable move: Repeat a sound across colour, size and texture.

Reusable frame: the [size] [colour-colour], [texture] [place]

Society

35. Society - small world

"Archer's little world"

Edith Wharton, The Age of Innocence (1920), Chapter 6

Device: Social metaphor

Why it works: A social circle becomes a tiny world with rules.

Portable move: Call a group or family a world.

Reusable frame: [Name]'s little world

Tension

36. Tension - held attention

"The story had held us"

Henry James, The Turn of the Screw (1898), Opening frame

Device: Personification of story

Why it works: A story becomes something that can grip people physically.

Portable move: Let an abstract thing hold the listener.

Reusable frame: The [story/secret/silence] had held us.

Abstract

38. Abstract - power imagined

"a shadowy conception of power"

George Eliot, Silas Marner (1861), Chapter 1

Device: Abstract noun phrase

Why it works: Power feels half understood and therefore more frightening.

Portable move: Give an abstract idea a visual adjective.

Reusable frame: a [visual adjective] conception of [abstract noun]

Ending

57. Ending - brief life

"Out, out, brief candle"

William Shakespeare, Macbeth (1606), Act V, Scene V

Device: Metaphor

Why it works: Life becomes a candle that can be snuffed out.

Portable move: Make life, hope or courage into a fragile flame.

Reusable frame: Out, out, brief [light/object]

Magic

60. Magic - dream substance

"such stuff as dreams are made on"

William Shakespeare, The Tempest (1611), Act IV, Scene I

Device: Metaphor

Why it works: Reality is made to feel delicate, theatrical and temporary.

Portable move: Turn an abstract experience into material.

Reusable frame: such stuff as [dreams/fears/memories] are made on
